requested that 15 positions be returned to provide for engineering, operational, technical, and support functions.

b. The third and last processor for the CIA Early SAFE Capability System was installed on 7 January. The SAFE Quarterly Status Review for management was held on 11 January; no issues or problems were identified.

c. The Department of Defense (DOD) has requested that the Agency review a manuscript written by a group of active duty Army officers who presented background material relative to the General Westmoreland/CBS lawsuit. The Classification Review Division (CRD), Office of Information Services, reviewed the document and returned it to DOD with no objection to its release. CRD has since learned that DOD is considering withholding the material because of their desire to maintain a neutral stance in the matter and not because of any concerns relating to security.

CRD has received over 3,000 pages of MACV and CIA documents from CBS with a request for a review to determine if the material might still be considered classified. CBS obtained these documents from Sam Adams, a former CIA analyst, who served as an advisor to CBS on the production of the TV program. A cursory examination by representatives of the Directorates of Operations and Intelligence indicated that some of the documents would, indeed, still be classified.
